Policy and Scope: World Englishes: Journal of English as an International and Intranational Language (WE) is devoted to the study of the forms and functions of varieties of English, both native and non-native, in diverse cultural and sociolinguistic contexts. WE contains major articles, short articles and notes, book reviews and notices, reports concerning conferences, projects, and research in progress, comments and replies, and listings of publications received, theses and dissertations. All major articles, short articles and notes should be sent to one of the editors. Book reviews and notices should be addressed to either P. Lowenberg or S. N. Sridhar. Information concerning reports, conferences, projects, research in progress, comments and replies, and listings of publications, theses and dissertations should be sent to K. Watson-Gegeo. WE invites issue-oriented original contributions on any aspect of English studies in the broadest sense, including language, literature, and methods of teaching English as a primary or additional language. The emphasis is on data-based research with a theoretical orientation. Contributions may deal with a specific variety of English or with two or more varieties in comparison. Particularly welcome are articles focusing on characteristics and functions of English in multilingual settings, including resultant changes in linguistic and literary features of English and of languages with which English comes into contact. Studies of literary aspects of world Englishes should clearly demonstrate their theoretical implications and preferably be of a comparative nature. WE will also consider articles of interest to researchers and teachers of English in areas such as language acquisition, bilingualism, dialectology, lexicography, sociolinguistics, stylistics, and English-based Pidgins and Creoles. Selected thematic issues have guest editors and focus on specific aspects of world Englishes, for example intelligibility, communicative competence, and non-native literatures.
